DESCENDANTS OF CHARLES R. McBRIDE and RHODA ALICE LYMAN McBRIDE

The past belongs to us by affectionate retrospect, while the future belongs to us no less by affectionate anticipation of those who are to come after us. And then only do we do ourselves justice when we are true to the blood we inherit, and true to those to whom we have been the means of transmitting that blood.

-- Daniel Webster

Patricia Precious, just another scrappy addition to this simple story of my very own mother, your great-grandmother, Rhoda Ann Taylor Lyman:

Landing after three months on the sailing vessel the Jennie Ford, the Saints -- among them the Taylor family of mother and six children -- arrived and were met at the wharf in San Pedro by members of the L.D.S. church to be taken to the headquarters. There it was that Francis Marion Lyman, a mere Mormon boy, met Mrs. Ann Stanley Taylor and her family. Helping with baggage and finding room in his wagon for them, he noticed what pretty girls they were, Jane, Ellen, Susan, and Rhoda. Rhoda it was that made the young Francis (Frank) take notice and from that day he courted the little Australian beauty. At the age of seventeen they were married and came to Salt Lake to make a place for themselves.

Darling, did I tell you that Rhoda and Frank Lyman were married November 18, 1857, when they were only seventeen years old, by Amasa M. Lyman, your great-great-grandfather, in San Bernardino, California? So young, and so happy, but with so many hardships along the way -- pioneering in this vast new country, Utah! Aren't we glad they were so brave and enduring with all there was to do, for it was due to their industry and integrity that we are we!

THE PARRATT FAMILY

George William Parratt, son of George Ferris and Ann (Buck) Parratt, was b. 10 June 1837, in Bath, Somersetshire, England, and d. 27 June 1917, in Salt Lake City, Utah. Like his father, he was a skilled cabinet maker, and for years was employed at the Dinwoody Furniture Company in Salt Lake City. He and his young wife came to Utah in 1864, with other members of the Parratt family, all converts to the Mormon church. After his wife died in 1871, he m. (2) Minerva Ann Perkins, daughter of Francis Asbury and Paulina (Brown) Perkins. She was b. 25 March 1849, in Floyd County, Indiana, and d. 18 May 1928, in Salt Lake City, Utah. She was a descendant of the early settlers of Long Island, and of the Mohawk Valley, her ancestors having pioneered in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, and Indiana.

LYMAN A McBRIDE AND HIS FAMILY

-- Virginia McBride

My parents were a handsome pair, busy with community life in our small Utah town, and often cited by the young people as the ideal married couple. Father was a competent dentist, who also played Chopin, and carried a full share of church and civic responsibilities. Mother had come to Tooele as a vivacious young school teacher, just out of the University of Utah, and later returned to marry one of the most eligible bachelors of the town. She had made it possible for Father to complete his education, and had become a leader in club work and the social life of the community, as well as church activities. My brothers and I were always proud of our parents, and their accomplishments and popularity.

Father was a graduate of the Brigham Young Academy in Provo, where he had also studied music with Anthony C. Lund, one of Utah's outstanding musicians. He had dreamed of becoming a professional musician himself, or possibly of becoming a dentist, for Grandfather Lyman had indicated that he wanted his eldest grandson, Lyman McBride, to have the dental instruments that he himself had used without training in pioneer times. However, these ambitions were forgotten when the Church called Father on a mission to Germany in 1898. He became proficient in the language of the country, and for three years spread the doctrine of Mormonism in Germany. Still, he attended operas and concerts whenever he had the opportunity, and travelled throughout Europe before returning to Utah.

After their marriage, my parents went to Oregon, where Father taught in various village schools, and then in the LeGrande High School as a German teacher. As their family grew, Father augmented his teacher's salary by working as a supervisor in the sugar-beet fields in the summer, and organizing an orchestra to play for dances in nearby towns. Bruce and I went along in the open buggy, wrapped in blankets at our parents' feet, and with hot bricks or a lantern for warmth. In the dance hall, the orchestra held forth in one corner, with Bruce and me bedded down with other children behind Father's piano, while our beautiful little Mother danced with the farm boys.

There seemed little opportunity in teaching, and after five years, Father cast about for a new occupation, possibly real estate. However, Mother insisted that they would somehow manage to pay for dental studies at Northwestern University in Chicago. They set out by train, with three children and $800, -- and Grandfather's promise of help if they really needed it.

Not only was Father a diligent student, but he also worked after hours as a shoe salesman, and as a clerk in the express office. They rented a large flat, so that Mother could take in other students as boarders; and she made clothes for us children, cut from parts of Father's and her own worn-out wardrobe -- coats, dresses, suits, caps, and even stockings. Still, we were never poor; there was always money enough for outings at Lincoln Park or the lake shore, and an occasional theater or musical.

Father studied directly under Dr. G. V. Black, who later was recognized throughout the country as an authority on dentistry; and he maintained a scholastic record high enough to warrant an invitation to membership in Omicron Kappa Upsilon when a chapter of that honorary fraternity was established at Northwestern some years after Father's graduation. He successfully wrote the State Dental Board Examinations in Utah and in California, but refused to go with his associates to a larger city to practise, preferring to remain in Tooele, where he served the community well, kept up with professional developments, and held office in the Utah State Dental Association. In time he was made an honorary member of the American Dental Association. Once when members of the alumni were urged to write letters of appreciation to Mrs. Montgomery Ward for a generous grant to the Northwestern University, College of Dentistry, Father's was one of three selected to be read at the banquet in her honor. For stationery, he had used an order blank from a Montgomery Ward catalog, thanking the donor, and explaining that in our town on the edge of the great American desert, we filled teeth according to the principles of Dr. G. V. Black and ordered our household goods from Montgomery Ward.

My parents built their home among fruit trees in the northern part of town, on a lot large enough to grow berries and vegetables, and even chickens. Plans for the house were prepared by one of the best architects in Salt Lake City; but when bids came in from the contractors, it was necessary to delete some of the most-wanted items, such as plate-glass windows, and hardwood floors. Father determined to be his own contractor and build the house piecemeal until he could afford to finish it. By a stroke of good fortune, he was able to include the plate-glass windows after all. Workmen installing a new front for the Tooele Mercantile Store dropped one large sheet of glass, breaking it directly through the middle. Father stood in the street and bargained with the foreman for the two half panes, still large enough for our big front windows. Uncle Andrew Parratt came from Salt Lake to finish the woodwork, rubbing and polishing the colonnades and bookcases and folding doors till Mother fairly bubbled with pride. We moved in to the house before the upstairs was finished, and I helped Mother nail laths to the bedroom frames in preparation for the plasterer. Grandfather Parratt selected the large round dining-room table which became the center for our family living. Everybody studied and worked around the table till mealtime, and then it served us generously, or opened up to accommodate a house full of guests.

There were many guests in my parents' home, spacious enough for bridge parties, family gatherings, or the annual banquet of the Federated Women's Club. Since hotel facilities were meager, Father invited concert artists -- all of whom he seemed to know -- to stay at our house when they performed in Tooele, as well as Church dignitaries, who usually stayed only for Sunday dinner. Father's quartet practised in the McBride home; and when Mother became proficient enough in china painting to teach classes of her own, they, too, met at our house; and the finished china was fired in Mother's kiln in our basement. Of course my brothers and I brought our friends regularly, for the welcome sign was always out.

Besides cooking and sewing for the family, and washing and boiling the clothes in the basement laundry, Mother often went to school as a substitute teacher; and she also taught in church organizations, advancing from Primary to Bee-Hive Girls and Mutual, as her own children progressed.

After we left home, she made her main contribution to the Relief Society, and received high praise from the General Board for her ability to interpret class outlines into broad concepts of ethical understanding. She also organized social clubs, a sewing circle, and study groups; and held office in the State Federation of Women's Clubs. At one time she was a judge in the needlework division of the Utah State Fair; and during World War I, she was County Chairman of the Women's Auxilliary of the Red Cross. Still, she had time for china painting; and all her household linens, as well as my clothes, were decorated with her handwork.

Father always held church offices, both at the ward and stake level, and was a High Priest. But he also made regular contributions to the Methodist and Catholic churches in our town. In addition, he belonged to the Commercial Club, and served on committees to plan Fourth-of-July programs. He helped to organize the Lions Club, and to bring the Chautauqua Circuit to Tooele. He was on the Library Board, and the Boy Scouts Court of Honor; he served as County Chairman of the Republican Party, and of the Red Cross, and as advisor to the Draft Board; and he was a member of the City Council. Still, he was not too busy to bring music into our home. Before the days of radio and television, he awakened the family every morning with his piano, or the phonograph. We had our own family orchestra, Father playing the piano, and my brothers the clarinet and the cornet, and I, the violin. We all had music lessons, but Father was the real musician in our family, playing and singing for us and the entire community.

For summer holidays, my parents packed rolls of bedding and tents and grub boxes on the running boards of the Dodge touring car -- not to mention a set of cans with emergency supplies of gas, oil, and water -- and we were off to the mountains or lakes for a vacation, usually with Uncle Dick and Aunt Ethel Reimers and our cousins. We camped beside the Riverside Geyser in Yellowstone, at the foot of the misty falls in Zion Canyon, and we attended a country dance at Bear Lake, and pitched our tents in tourist camps along our routes. We saw only a few travellers besides ourselves, but always exchanged greetings and road information.

Looking back, it seems that we lived in one of the most delightful periods of American history, and in one of the most beautiful spots. We were surrounded by unspoiled mountains and forests and canyons. The back-breaking toil and frustrations of pioneer days were gone; and the problems of over-population and pollution were far off in an undreamed-of future. Success was waiting for anyone willing to work for it, and family units were secure in mutual respect and shared responsibilities. Self-reliance and good manners were virtues to be cultivated, as were self-control and industry. Loyalty to the country and its laws, and to one's family were expected; and moral standards set down by the church and tradition were unquestioned. The ideals established in our parents' home, and in the schools and church for which they worked, brought security and a sense of well-being into our lives, that somehow seems to have been lost by today's leaders. No wonder Lyman and Ida McBride were admired by their children, and hailed by their neighbors as "the ideal married couple."

Bruce P. McBride was graduated D.D.S. from the University of California, and for many years practised dentistry in Salt Lake City. He was elected President of the Utah State Dental Association, and compiled a history of dentistry in Utah. Governor J. Bracken Lee appointed him to a committee in 1952 to study and rewrite the Health Code for Utah.

In addition to his profession, Bruce has had many other interests. As a Boy Scout during World War I, he collected clothing for needy Europeans, and sold so many Liberty Bonds that he was recognized with a special medal. In high school he played football and participated in the band and orchestra as a clarinetist. When he joined the Lions Club, the McBride family was publicized as the first to have three generations in that organization. In World War II, he volunteered for the U. S. Army, Dental Corps, was sent to the South Pacific and the Philippines, and was discharged at the close of the war with the rank of Captain. Bruce and his family have always enjoyed outdoor holidays, so that a trailer, a boat, and camping gear have been necessities in their lives, and they have explored mountains, canyons, and lakes as thoroughly as did their pioneer forbears.

When cancer robbed Bruce of a leg in 1957 and he was told he must find a new occupation, his tenacity and buoyance of personality led him to fashion the necessary equipment to enable him to practise dentistry for another ten years, much to the satisfaction of his patients.

Helen still teaches first grade at Roland Hall and loves it. I am trying to convert Park City into a Utah "Aspen" or "Sun Valley" by changing from large-scale mining to large-scale recreation. It's fun, but it is quite a change for a mining engineer.

NATIVE OF TOOELE

D R O U B A Y M A N F O R M I N E J O B

Seldom does the mining industry go far astray in its choice of men to handle difficult operating problems. This sketch has to do with the experience of an engineer for just such a job.

Seth K. (Red) Droubay was born at Tooele, Utah, December 21, 1902. He attended schools in Tooele, Garfield, and Murray and obtained his B.S. degree in mining and metalurgy from the University of Utah in 1926. While attending school he worked during the summers at the Tooele and Garfield smelters.

From 1926 to 1933 he -- as did such well known men as Oscar Glaeser, Jack Ehrhorn, and Mayer Hansen -- got invaluable training and experience in mining, geology, timbering, and supervising under the unforgettable Val deCamp at the United Verde Copper Co., Jerome, Arizona.

While in Jerome, in 1930, "Red" acquired his helpful partner in life, the former Helen Beck. In addition to her home duties, she -- since their marriage -- has obtained degrees from both the University of Utah and the University of California, and has graduated from the Billings, Montana, Business College in bookkeeping and stenography. Despite all this she has been active in Girl Scouts, school boards, and general community work in many mining camps. The Droubays have two daughters, both of whom display their mother's thirst for knowledge.

In 1933 Droubay shifted to gold mining in the Grass Valley district of California, where he did mining and mucking in the Hoge and Original Sixteen-to-One mines until 1935. From Grass Valley he went to the Walker copper Mine in California, subsidiary of International Smelting and Refining Co. Here he was geologist and chief engineer until 1941, when he became general foreman of operations at the Copper Canyon lease near Battle Mountain, Nevada.

Next, during the period 1941-1944, "Red" switched to important chrome production in Montana, first as superintendent and later as acting manager for the defense chrome operations of Anaconda Copper Mining Co. When this Operation was shut down in 1944 he was made manager of the lead-zinc operations of International Smelting and Refining Co., at the South Mountain mine at Jordan Valley, Oregon.

From 1945 through much of 1953, Droubay managed the important Darwin and Tecopa zinc-silver-lead mines of Anaconda Copper in the Darwin district of California.

Thus, to those familiar with mining, it is obvious that this much younger appearing man than he actually is, has encountered most any problem now confronting him in his new position. "Red" does not "advertise" his qualifications but his record, personality, and quiet determination indicate to all informed individuals that he is eminently qualified to fill his present position as general manager of the Park City properties of the United Park City Mines Co.

I remember that Grandfather had a granary in his barn, that was always full of wheat, and he used to take grain to the flour mill occasionally to replenish the flour supply. His home was surrounded by a large yard, with fruit trees and a wonderful grape arbor; and I recall working for Grandfather, irrigating and cutting and raking the grass under the fruit trees. The first automobile he had, was a dodge touring car, I think; and sometimes when he made trips to Salt Lake, I rode with him and stayed with Aunt LaVern and Uncle George Gibbs. Wendell and I spent quite a lot of time together in our younger days. I also remember Grandmother's electric car, and what a privilege it was to ride to Pine Canyon with her.

Grandfather always took time to talk with me and ask questions about my plans and ambitions, showing the love and patience he had for all his numerous grandchildren. On several occasions, I visited him at work, in the Claims Office for the Smelting Company. I don't remember his ever being impatient with me or my questions. All who had business with him respected him and seemed confident and satisfied in their relations with him. His employers kept him on the job as long as he was physically able; and even when I left Tooele, he was still driving and his mind was clear and alert.

As for me and my family, I was graduated from Henagers Business College in Salt Lake City, in Accounting, and in April of 1939, we were transferred from Salt Lake City to Seattle, Washington, by the Coca-Cola Bottling Company, where we have worked ever since. At present I am Office Manager of the company in Seattle. (Note: At the time of his death in 1965, Warren was Chief Auditor for the company.) Ruth has worked in the Mercer Island School lunch program for the past five school years.

In the Seattle 4th Ward, Ruth worked as counsellor for the Relief Society President, and I served as Ward Clerk. Now we are living in the Bellevue Ward, and Ruth is at present Secretary for the Sunday School and for the M.I.A. I am Ward Clerk now for the Bellevue Ward, Seattle Stake; and also Welfare Farm Auditor and Bookkeeper for Seattle and North Seattle Stakes.

Robert and Betty Ann and their family are living in Decatur, Alabama, where he is employed by the Boeing Airplane Company on the Space Missile Program. He was graduated from the University of Washington in Electrical Engineering, and worked for the Boeing Aircraft Company in Seattle before being transferred to Alabama. In their ward in Decatur, Robert is M.I.A. President, and Betty Ann is Primary President and also active in genealogical work.

Melvin returned last November from a full-time mission in the Argentine. He is an Eagle Scout, and served six months in the United States Marines. He is now contemplating going to the B.Y.U. in Provo this coming fall.

Our only other "young-un" Joy is in the 7th grade, so it won't be long before she has grown away from us. She has just graduated from Primary and is in the M.I.A. this year.

FAMILY NOTES

--- Juel Droubay, 1962

Our little family has been living in Butte, Montana since 1950, after spending five years in Arizona. We thoroughly enjoy this rugged area, in the cold white winters as well as the summers. The hardy atmosphere has contributed to the development of the children.

Since I received my degree from the University of California in 1940, I have been employed by the Anaconda Mining Company, with time out for a stretch in the Army, and in the Air Force, up to Lieutenant Colonel. I am still in the Organized Reserve Forces. I spent ten years at the Kelley Mine in Butte, developing Block Cave Mining, the first time used in Montana. At present we are adapting the Caving system to vein zinc. Golfing, hunting, and fishing are the hobbies that take me into the great outdoors of Montana. And my idle time is taken up in church activities, especially M.I.A.

Margaret is a wonderful wife and mother. She stayed home for several years to raise our children, but has now returned to teaching shorthand and typing. She teaches at the Girls Central High School, a Catholic school, though she is a devout Mormon. She has taught the Teachers Training course for our ward, and is active in the M.I.A. speech, drama, and dancing projects. She also loves to play golf and duplicate bridge.

Gary is a big, strapping blond of eighteen. Golf has taken his energies in the summer, and he shoots a good game of 75 at his best. Winter finds him deep in the snow, skiing and jumping. He did very well on his high school team, finishing 5th in the State Ski Jumping, and well up in the Crosscountry and Slalom. At present he is at West Point as a Plebe, entering the Academy on an appointment from Senator Metcalf of Montana.

Peter is now my hunting companion. He is a sophomore at Butte High, and plays basketball for the L.D.S. junior team. Last year his team won the Northwest Championship and made the trip to Salt Lake City for the All Church Tournament. He has won the All City Championship for golf in his age group. But now that the snows have come, he has taken to the ski slopes.

Jeanine is thirteen, and blossoming into a lovely young lady, blond and stately. She has done wonderfully well in speed skating, and has a shelf full of trophies and medals for participating in the Canadian as well as the U. S. championship meet. She is active in school clubs and the church, but right now her interest is all in skiing.

We are a happy family, rather boistrous at times, but we all love each other. We have many interests, but are guided by the Principles of the Gospel and enjoy the influence of the church.

FAMILY NOTES

--- Rachel Droubay Hawkins, 1963

I was born in the old home of my parents, just a block west of my Grandfather's place, and next door to Aunt Sula and Uncle John Brotherton. Harriet and I were always together, being about the same age. But we played with Louise and Alma and Josephine, too, and spent much of our time in Grandfather's yard. I loved my grandparents very much, and their big house, and the fruit trees. I remember especially the family gatherings, and the times I stayed with my cousin Jeannette, who lived at Grandmother's home. When we moved to our new house in the north end of town, I had a bedroom of my own, but I missed my cousins. Juel and I were the only children at home, for the others were married or away working or going to school. I really didn't know my older sister and brothers very well till they returned to Mother's house from time to time with their own children. I was happy when Ivan and Sal returned from California with their baby Dale, and when Helen came home with her little Jack for awhile. I loved the babies.

Mother and Daddy didn't have very much money, but as much as most people in our town. We had enough for school and special events and trips, and our home was always neat and clean and full of love. Mother did the sewing, and my clothes were nice enough, though not expensive. She taught me to cook and keep house and sew. Daddy always felt that he should be making more money, and regretted that he could not leave us an inheritance when he died. But the atmosphere in our home was more valuable than wealth. He and Mother lived the Gospel, and set good examples for us. I don't remember their ever speaking unkindly to each other or to us children.

The day after my high school graduation, I was married to Weston Bates and moved to Uintah Basin, where we raised our children until five years ago. Our marriage finally ended in divorce. You know that I am re-married, but I must tell you that I am happier now than I have ever been before. The reason is that my husband, Joe Hawkins, and I share the same love of the Gospel and the church, the most important things in our lives. My children love Joe, too, and feel fortunate to have him as the head of our family. He is a carpenter, served a two-year mission in the Central States prior to our marriage, and is active in Senior Aaronic work. The only unhappiness in our marriage was the loss of our beautiful little son, Joseph Seth, last February.

As for my family now, we are rather scattered. David served eight years in the U.S. Air Force, before settling in Sacramento. He is a salesman for the California Western Life Insurance Company. Both he and his wife are active in the L.D.S. church. Beryle and her husband Kent are happy and busy. He is a graduate of the University of Utah, and served a two-year mission in Holland. He is now at the University of Indiana, working toward a Master's in International Economics. Beryle is secretary to the president of the alumni at the University. Meryle was married at seventeen and divorced three years later. She has a job as assistant editor to the T.V. Guide Magazine in the Salt Lake office. Only the youngest girl, Janet, is home with us now.

From the time she was eight years old, Shirley studied violin, and has taught it since she was twelve. When her parents moved to Hayward, she studied with the National Institute of Music, and taught as many as 100 pupils a week. In 1946 she entered San Jose State College, but returned to Hayward every Saturday to teach. Through her music she met James William Schwartz, who was first-chair solo in the San Jose State Symphony and the San Jose Civic Symphony, playing clairnets.

He was also in World War II. He fought with the Eighth Infantry Division, and played in the band. He trained with the Signal Corps, installing communications, landed in France in 1944, and was in the Battle of the Bulge. He was shipped home for furlough before being assigned to Japan; but the atom bomb was dropped and he was released in November, 1945.

HARVEY KIRK

--- Aura Bennett Kirk

Harvey began helping Grandfather with the milking when he was six years old, and by the time he was nine, was going over before breakfast and milking six cows, both morning and night. In a large family there were always jobs for the eldest grandson. Everybody needed a boy to help, but no one understood that a child needed money. The Kirk children did not have allowances, and seldom a nickel to spend. Harvey says he grew up working hard and hoping that someone would pay him.

When he was eight or ten, he began going with his father to the mines. His job was to drive the horse, pulling up the bags or buckets of ore. Not till he was thirteen did his father pay him anything for this work.

The first year Grover was married, Harvey went to Lincoln to help on the ranch, and he went every summer for many years. He drove teams, built fences, pitched hay, and irrigated, taking a man's responsibility. Once he asked Grover how much he was to be paid. Grover laughed and said, "Well, I think you are worth a dollar a day." The end of the summer came, there was no money, and Harvey went home empty handed. He was disappointed, for he needed clothes for school.

Grandmother was President of the Relief Society, and took Harvey to help her. When they arrived at the hall, Harvey cleaned out the ashes, started the fire, and swept out the room. When the ladies came and gathered around the quilting frames, Harvey sat on the floor underneath, to push their needles back through the heavy bats. He had also helped to wash and card the wool to make the bats. The Relief Society meetings seemed long and tiresome to the boy. Still, he went without complaining.

The Bishop also sent him around the Ward to collect the Fast Offerings. It was customary to give bags of wheat instead of money; but Harvey wasn't large enough to carry a 25-pound bag of grain. He pulled a little wagon to bring back the offerings.

Some of his happiest memories are the family reunions for the McBrides and the Lymans at Saltair. Then everyone rode on the train to Salt Lake City, and took another train to the resort, sitting on tiers of benches rising lengthwise in the open cars.

In 1916, he got his first regular job with the Smelter, and was paid $4.00 a day, excellent wages for the times. Now Harvey could plan for college. His father did not consider education of much value, and encouraged the children to leave school and get jobs as soon as they were big enough to work. When he was in high school, Harvey played basketball on a winning team. And about this time he got a place on the Tooele City baseball team. He played first base till 1927.

I first met Harvey in the spring of 1923, at the Utah Agriculture College. I was a timid freshman, caught up in the sorority rushing season. A girl arranged a blind date for me with Harvey, telling me he was an excellent dancer, and my mother that he was "a good Mormon boy." She brought him to the house to introduce him in the afternoon; and about 7:00 o'clock a rosebud corsage was delivered to my door. (He told me later that he had borrowed money to pay for it.) I was very happy, for I had had only one corsage before. Needless to say, Harvey was a superb dancer, and we had a fabulous evening. That was the beginning of our romance, which has lasted 38 years and 29 changes of residence.

We were married in the Logan Temple on June 2, 1926, and had a big wedding reception, with a special band, good food, an array of wedding gifts, and a honeymoon to Bear Lake. Harvey had a job for September to coach at the Coalville High School. He was a 4-Letter man; i.e., football, basketball, track, and baseball. But for the summer he returned to the mines in Tooele. We went to stay with Grandmother and Grandfather McBride. We slept in The Little House, but I spent most of my time with Grandmother and Vera. Aunt Nell and Aunt Sula would come over, and we talked a great deal. Vera was always cooking and baking, but I was free to riding with Grandmother in her electric car.

Harvey coached and took more work at the A.C. until he received his Master's Degree in 1928 in Agricultural Economics and Marketing, and our little girl was born in 1929. For the next thirty years Harvey worked for a succession of companies, traveling over a wide territory and transferring whenever there was an opportunity for promotion. It was a hectic life, as he was away long periods, and we were always moving from one place to another. Harvey worked for the Purina Company, and Globe Mills of Sacramento, the Poehlman Hatchery of Petaluma, the Alberts Company, and the Carnation Company. We lived in Logan Utah; Safford, Arizona, Provo, Utah; Alberquerque, New Mexico; Yuba City, Chico, Oakland, and Castro Valley, California, not to mention a pleasant stay on a ranch near Sonoma. Harvey finally became sales manager for the Carnation Company in Oakland, and a member of the Credit Board, and remained in those positions until his health failed, and he had several heart attacks. Now he has a less-demanding job as Security Guard.

We lead a quiet life, enjoying our grandchildren and seeing our friends regularly. We recently celebrated Harvey's 63rd birthday. We see Kathryn and John quite often, and Jack and Dorothy Kirk, and Aunt Sula and Uncle John. We tell each other that we've had a good life, and I am sure I wouldn't trade Harvey for anyone else I know.

FAMILY NOTES

--- Kay R. Kirk, 1963

I have been working for the city of Sacramento as a Chief Operator in the Water Department, at the Treatment Sewage Plant. We have some of the largest water storage tanks in the world here in Sacramento. I hold a Contractor's License in the State of California for Well Drilling and Pump Installation.

In my spare time I help build custom engines for race cars, and then build Go-Go. I have a large one with a $7\frac{1}{2}$ H.P. engine, and a middle-sized one with a 5 H.P. engine. The miniature ones have 3 H.P. engines and six-inch wheels. The grand kids have the time of their lives with them.

I have a complete machine shop, so that I do all the making of parts to fit. I enjoy planning and drawing out these things to make the kids happy. I ride them, too. My grandson Chris and I use them to go hunting to save walking. This fall we are going with my brother-in-law, R. M. Hansen, to Ft. Collins, Colorado, to hunt deer and elk. The snow is already down to the 4,000 ft. level, and the rivers and dams and creeks are full of water.

It seems that when I was a child, our parents were always moving from one place to another. Dad worked hard, as there was a bunch of kids to care for. We always had plenty of food to eat and clothes to wear. Dad worked at several mines out of Tooele, and where he went, Mother and the kids went, too. We lived in mining camps, on farms, in the cities, and in the country. We all loved to gather rocks for samples, and learned to watch for mineral content. We also learned to work hard and take care of ourselves at an early age.

GROVER AND ZELLA McBRIDE

The house where Grover McBride was born in 1885 is still standing on the hill near the Tooele cemetery. At that time it was far from the center of town, and there were no close neighbors. Frequently the Indians came begging for food and clothing. Some were friendly, but some were not, and Grover's mother was often afraid. When his father had a chance to purchase a new home that was just being finished, he moved the family to 112 South First West, where they lived till all the children were grown and the parents passed away.

The day before Grover was nine years old, he was injured by a shotgun blast when he and some other children were playing with forbidden guns. He spent the next six weeks in the Holy Cross Hospital in Salt Lake City for a series of operations. Though he recovered, he had lost one eye, and still carries fragments of shot in his face. After that he spent a great deal of time with his father, riding great distances to care for cattle and herds of sheep in Utah and Idaho. He was an excellent rider and always ready for adventure.

One story never ceases to delight his grandchildren. At one time Teddy Roosevelt was to lead his famous Rough Riders in a celebration in Salt Lake, and many of the Utah boys were also invited to be in the parade. But when they were assigned places, the country boys found themselves at the end of the lines, following the Salt Lake riders. Grover and his companion dared each other to break ranks and move forward. At the appointed place, they raced ahead, took positions on either side of Roosevelt himself, and accompanied the famous guest throughout. The officials were angry, but the boys won the congratulations of Teddy Roosevelt, who praised them for their ability to ride.

When Grover was called on a mission to Australia, he had a chance to meet relatives of his grandmother, Rhoda Ann Taylor Lyman. And he also had an opportunity to study with the best voice teacher in Sydney. Grover had a beautiful clear tenor voice, and had always sung with the family at home; and when his sisters had not been there to play an accompaniment for him, he had played his mother's guitar for himself. Now his teacher was so pleased with his talent that he asked Grover to join a group of musicians for a world tour, an invitation that Grover declined. But after he returned home, he won a local contest and represented Tooele Stake at an all-Church contest in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. When he was awarded first place, singing Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold, he was urged to develop his talent and make music his career. He loved to sing, but had no ambition for the concert stage, preferring horses, and farming, and the great western outdoors.

After he returned from Australia, he married the girl who had been waiting for him. He had first met Zella Robbins when she entered the eighth grade in the Tooele school, having moved to the town with her mother. They had come from St. George where her mother had worked in the silk industry, and brought with them lengths of fabric that had been produced entirely of silk, grown, spun, and woven in Utah. Zella was very pretty, with long black hair, hazel eyes, and a clear complexion. She had been taught elocution and was in demand as an entertainer. Years later her own children begged her to recite the poem about the bride and groom who rode horseback to the parson and paid him with a bag of beans, and the one about the boy who was caught carving his school desk with the words "I love you."

When Grover and Zella were married they moved to a farm not far from Tooele where smoke from the newly-opened smelter was expected to do a great deal of damage. Grover experimented with crops and animals for the Smelter to determine which might be grown successfully in spite of the smoke. He learned that bees could not survive; but he raised wheat of superior quality, and the Government bought it all for seed. Some horses and cattle died from smelter smoke; but chickens did so well that he sold them all to the railroads for their dining cars.

After methods were found to control smelter smoke, Grover turned his interests to farming and ranching for himself. He remained on the same property till his children persuaded him to retire when he was eighty years old.

--- from The Tooele Transcript, August 10, 1962:

Lincoln Resident Tells Philosophy

--- by Betsy McAlister

From the porch of his pleasant old brick home, Grover McBride can look far out over the fields and farms of Lincoln, Erda, and Grantsville, the trees and roofs of Tooele, the Great Salt Lake, Stansbury Island, and westward to the mountains. On certain days he can even see to the Raft River Mountains of Idaho.

"I've lived here 52 years," said Mr. McBride, "and I've watched a lot, and it's surprising how much I've seen in those 52 years."

Mr. McBride has been observing a lot longer than that. Born in 1884, he remembers much that has changed and vanished. One of his earliest recollections is of a man cutting wheat with a cradle opposite the old McBride home, which is still standing at the corner of First South and First West in Tooele.

He remembers when ten-yoke ox teams passed by hauling mining machinery to Fish Springs, and when the narrow guage railroad was running to Stockton.

At the age of 17 he was running sheep across Idaho, through the Burley area and what is now the irrigation country, some time before either Burley or the irrigation system was there.

Mr. McBride attended college at Logan, graduating in a class of 40 members, and went on to spend a year at the University of Utah, because he thought of teaching.

Changing his mind, however, he turned toward industry and helped run the first survey line for the tram from the old Highland Boy Mine above Bingham to the Tooele Smelter.

Incidentally, though the Highland Boy shut down in the 1920's, parts of this old tram remain and may easily be seen crowning the summit of the Oquirrh Range just southeast of the smelter.

A mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints then called him to Australia and he spent the next three years in Sydney and Brisbane.

Upon his return in 1910, he was married to Miss Zella Robbins of Salt Lake City, and they moved to their present home. "We came to stay six months and we've been here ever since," said Mrs. McBride, a lovely gracious woman.

Under the title of Lakeview Land and Cattle Company, Mr. McBride and his father, who was the claims agent at the Smelter, bought up options on the land surrounding the smelter. At one time they owned all the acreage thereabouts except that on which the Smelter stood, including thirteen homes and extending through the present day Clegg Ranch at Erda.

The Smelter eventually bought much of the land back, and through the years the property has gradually been trimmed down to 1,000 acres, which Mr. McBride now operates, running sufficient cattle and raising grain with pasture acreage to meet their needs.

A number of years ago, when the Cerro de Pasco Mining Corporation acquired a million acres of land in Peru, Mr. McBride was suggested by an official of the Anaconda Company as the man to help select stock for the enormous ranch. Accordingly, he spent several months buying large numbers of cattle and sheep for export. Although types and quantities were generally specified, he used his own judgment when necessary. For example, the company asked for Merino sheep. Knowing that Rambouillets had superceded the smaller Merino, Mr. McBride substituted them. As they were much larger than the Merinoes, they proved a source of great amazement and excitement upon their arrival in Peru, to Mr. McBride's evident amusement.

He was later offered the job of ranch manager, but decided that he preferred to remain in this country.

Mr. McBride's house is old, handsome, and inviting. Built at least 75 years ago by the Leaver family, it is surrounded by enormous trees. Noteworthy is a five-acre orchard of mulberry trees planted by the pioneers as part of an early but unsuccessful attempt to establish a silk industry in Utah; and an enormous silver maple about four feet in diameter, which shades the southwest corner of the house.

Two willows were planted to the west of the house by Deseret Leaver Gowans on a long-ago day when neighbors had gathered with plants and young trees to help landscape the place. Mrs. Gowans was then a small girl and the willows were tiny shoots. In the confusion, so the story goes, no one would stop to listen and tell her where to plant her offering, and so she finally chose a spot herself and stuck them in the ground. There they tower today, still sound and sturdy.

Mr. and Mrs. McBride raised seven children, putting each in turn on horseback at an early age and entrusting each with certain responsibilities connected with the ranch. All seven had their own saddle and horses.

"One of the important things in farming," says Mr. McBride, (and he doubtless means in life as well) "is to change methods when something better comes along." Life to him is a wonderful thing, not to be cheapened by belittling its meaning. At the same time he is willing to accept a broad spectrum of thoughts related to the meaning of existence. To him, the order in the universe is evidence of a Divine Purpose. He wants to be a part of something which has meaning, and he said, "I want to know who I am."

Alice was a beautiful child, with golden curls and fine features. She grew to be one of the most attractive girls in Tooele. As a child, she lived on the farm and learned to ride early. Her horse, named Pat, had previously belonged to the Warden of the State Prison; and her brother Karl insists that the fastest ride he ever had was when Alice took him to Tooele to be baptized. Life on a farm had drawbacks for a little girl. Her brothers were always teasing and playing jokes on her, and even when her father took her to the State Fair, she complained that she saw nothing but bulls. She was happy when it was decided that she should attend the Quish School of Beauty in Salt Lake. In 1930, she married Mark J. Lindberg of Tooele. He is in the merchantile business, and has served as President of the Tooele County Chamber of Commerce. Now that their daughters are grown, Alice has turned her interests to golf, and has an array of trophies as evidence of her success. She has filled many positions of importance in local and state golf circles.

MY FAMILY AND I

--- Charles Williams McBride, 1963

I was born on a cold stormy day at the old family home in Lincoln, Tooele County, Utah, on November 12, 1914. I was so small and sickly that I was not expected to live, and my Grandfather McBride hurriedly blessed me and gave me the name Charles Williams, after himself and his own grandfather, Charles Hamilton Williams. That was a good beginning, and I grew strong enough to take my place in the family with my three brothers and my three sisters. We did the things that normal healthy country kids were expected to do: did our chores, played hard, rode the bus to school, and helped manage the family farm and ranch activities. Hugh and I used to watch the ewes and the lambs in the summer, and we always built a fire high on the mountain to tell our mother that all was well with us.

Grandfather must have taken a special liking to me, for when he and Grandmother went to their summer cabin in Pass Canyon, they usually picked me up to go with them. I would help Grandfather maintain his road and pipeline; specifically, I would carry the sack of tools while he repaired the leaks. Whenever the wrench slipped or something went wrong, he would use his most violent expression, "Tarnation!!" I remember that Grandmother was faithful to one small trait: she always finished every meal with a bit of bread and butter and honey. She was very fond of sweets.

During the early 30's we were very poor. The depression was on, and Father had just started us seven kids in school. Then I asked him for $1.50 for a locker fee, and he didn't have it; he had run out of money. I remember he just leaned against the fence, and tears came in his eyes. He just didn't have the money, and couldn't give it to me. Anyhow, we always had plenty to eat, and were comfortable. And before long, we were financially sound again. My father, like his father, is hard working, and has no thoughts of retiring.

I progressed through high school; the Utah State University; and two years, three months, and six days in the Army. On Oct. 2, 1940, I married Louise Bair of Richmond, Utah, in the Logan Temple. We have two children, Charles Brent and Katheryn. Kathy is now attending Ben Lomand High School in Ogden, and Brent has completed a two-year mission in England. He has just resumed his pre-med studies at Weber College in Ogden.

I am working for the Government as a Management Analyst at the Hill Air Force Base, near Ogden. In fact, I have worked for the Government so long that I am beginning to think I was never born, but only issued. Louise is working at the R. L. Samuels Company, one of the best stores in this area, and is recognized as an authority on teen-age fashions and clothes. My hobbies are golfing, hunting (with Brent), and home improvement projects. We are all active in church affairs, too, and keep very busy.

It has been almost thirty years since I left home and my parents. I love them dearly and will always honor them for living a good example for us to follow. They taught me love and respect, how to work, and an appreciation of worthwhile things.

FAMILY NOTES

--- Karl W. McBride, 1963

I spent a normal childhood in Tooele County, under the influence of the home, the school and the church. It was my job to help my brother Mark when he herded cattle, or took them to the outer regions of the range. But my own special interest was music, and I would practice in the church while the other children were waiting for the bus. It took a loud blast of the horn to pry me away from the piano bench. My father often scolded me for spending so much time with music when there was serious work to be done.

I spent four years at the State college in Logan, Utah, and received a degree in 1939 in Agriculture, with a major in agronomy and a minor in chemistry.

The same year, I married Florence Smith in the St. George Temple, and our only child, Joseph Carlyle, was born in 1943. Although we have only one son, we have had three other children in our home at different times, so that we have usually had a good-sized family. Joseph graduated from high school last year, and received the Dean Barrus award for being the outstanding athlete in track for the year. At present he is serving an L.D.S. mission in the Western States.

I spent five years as an agronomist for the International Smelting and Refining Company, working with my grandfather, C. R. McBride. In 1943 I went into the Air Corps, and spent one year in training, and three more as a pilot, seeing America and Europe under varying conditions of war. When I returned from Germany in 1947, I went into the Building Supply Business in Tooele, with Jesse W. Duffin as my partner. For the last sixteen years we have enjoyed a steady growth, and hope for continued success in the future.

At present my energies are divided between running the business and carrying on the duties of a Counsellor in the ward bishopric, Stake Priesthood Organist, and a Director of the Tooele County Chamber of Commerce. Florence is Stake President of the YWCA. Neither of us lacks for things to do.

It was my privilege and opportunity to work with my grandfather, C. R. McBride, in the Tax and Claims Office of the International Smelting and Refining Company, along with Tom Crandall. Grandfather had long since passed his 85th birthday, but his knowledge of the history and development of Tooele County and the state made him a valuable man in the company, and he was kept on many years beyond normal retirement. We had plenty to do, but we were our own bosses as to how and when to get it done.

I remember one morning Tom brought in the mail, and Grandfather picked up the Tooele Transcript and settled back in his chair, with his back to the old wooden desk and his knees nearly as high as his brown wooden table. With his glasses low on his nose, he relaxed and said, "Now let's see what's doing." In the next breath he commented, "Oh, they are dedicating a monument today, at 1:00 o'clock, out at Stockton, where that old smelter once stood. I think I'll take Mother out to see it. She loves to get out." As he went on reading, he suddenly sat up, exclaiming, "Great Scott! It says here that I'm to be featured speaker for the afternoon!" Someone had neglected to ask him, and if he had not read the paper, he would have been unaware of the assignment. Needless to say, he and Grandmother made the celebration, and he gave a short but to-the-point talk about the events and happenings around Stockton at the time the smelter was operating. He was well acquainted with the subject, and was always an excellent speaker.

Her three older brothers thought Geneve was the prettiest little girl they had ever seen, and the best natured. But she says they teased her so much that she grew up to be a frustrated old woman. They still remind her how she used to sit on the kitchen table, dressed in coveralls, and tell them stories while their mother washed the dishes. But they tell other people that she is as lovely as a sister can be, and that she is a joy to have around. She has a special talent for relieving the sick and suffering, and is a skilled technician at the Tooele Valley Hospital.

After the smelting industry came to Tooele in 1910, non-Mormons moved in from other mining areas, and the town seemed full of energetic young men seeking fun as well as employment. The McBride home became a gathering place for the young people; and they were made welcome, even though they did not share the religious convictions of the early pioneers. The house was full of music and laughter, and the pretty McBride girls were very popular.

Among those who came was George C. Chase, a quiet and dignified young man who seemed to enjoy the home atmosphere, though he was an observer rather than a participant in the activities. He had left his family home in Canandaigua, New York, to come west and work for a relative, a Mr. Warner, who had established a lumber business in Tooele. After he and Iva McBride were married, they lived in Tooele for several years before moving to Payson, Utah, where he opened his own lumber business. George C. Chase was always well-read, and surrounded himself with books and magazines. He was kind and considerate, and endeared himself to all the McBrides, but especially to his father-in-law, Charles R. McBride. Their relationship was based on mutual admiration and respect. They were alike in many ways, possessing the same kind of integrity and independence. They trusted each other's judgment, and found opportunity for much serious discussion.

THE CHASE HOUSEHOLD

--- Charles George Chase, 1963

Although I was born in Tooele, I remember nothing of my parents till the time we were living in Payson, Utah. I think we had moved there when I was two or three. Father had bought a lumber yard in Payson at the time, and operated it till his retirement some years ago. He is still living in Payson, in the same house where I have all my memories of growing up.

Life in our household was not much different from what it was in any other Utah family. Father arose about six each morning to leave for work. Mother cooked, cleaned, washed, and did the housekeeping chores. I remember her doing the wash in the basement, in an old-fashioned washing machine -- and boiling the clothes. She would carry baskets full of wet clothes up the basement stairs and hang them out on the clothesline -- heavy work for a woman. And I remember her cooking, getting flour and sugar out of a bin instead of a can or a sack. As most people did then, we bought kitchen supplies in 100-pound sacks instead of five or ten pounds at a time.

And so during the day, Mother and Father spent most of their time working, while I was off to school as soon as I was old enough to attend. Occasionally Mother did attend her bridge club, or some other event, as most women do. Generally in the evenings, Father read; and Mother read, sewed, or listened to the radio. On Sunday afternoons we often rode to Provo to have lunch and see a movie.

I now live with my wife and four children in Walnut Creek, California, a suburb about twenty-five miles east of San Francisco. Each working day I commute by bus to San Francisco, where I work at the General Office of the California Ink Company. My job involves systems and procedures, accounting, and various administrative duties.

I remember two things my Grandfather McBride told me. When we told him we were coming to California, he said: "It's a good place to go if you want an easy life."

Another time, he said he had had all the experiences of life except one, and now he was looking forward to the last one -- death.

AUNT LAVERNE AND UNCLE GEORGE

--- Virginia McBride

When she was eighteen, Aunt LaVerne married George Snow Gibbs, who had once been her school teacher, and went to Salt Lake to live. Sometimes she came to Tooele on the train, looking crisp and young with her sparkling eyes and sunny hair, and bringing Wendell in his upright go-cart. He was a smiling baby, with white hair so soft and fine that Lloyd called him Silky. Ruth and I begged to take him to town, though the wheels of the go-cart would catch in the railroad tracks on Vine Street and turn over if we weren't careful.

Uncle George was a scholar. He had degrees from the University of Utah and Stanford, and had attended the University of Wisconsin and the University of Pennsylvania. While at Stanford he had won the Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University in England. Always quiet and deliberate in his manner, he was soft-spoken and humorless, and not easily swayed from his convictions. He was director of the psychological clinic for the Salt Lake City Board of Education, and head of a school for retarded children. When the Gibbs came to Tooele for family gatherings, Uncle George always brought along a book, though Grandmother's house was usually full of people. After dinner the young people would crowd around the piano in one living room to sing and laugh; across the hall in the other, the men gathered around Grandfather to discuss water rights, land prices, wheat crops, politics, and smelter smoke; the women settled down in the far end of the dining room, occupied with patterns, recipes, and remedies; and the yard was full of children. But Uncle George would find a quiet spot to read, or withdraw to somebody's car. Sometimes he would call us around him to ask questions -- questions that had no relation to each other, but seemed important to him. When I asked Mother about them, she laughed and said he was testing our mentality.

After my great-grandparents died in 1916 and 1917, Grandfather was able to get the old Lyman home on Third Avenue for the Gibbs, and after that their home was the Salt Lake headquarters for the family. Knowing that payments were still due on the house, my grandparents stayed there instead of going to a hotel, and insisted on paying Aunt LaVerne for their lodging. When Ruth was sent to the L.D.S. Academy in Salt Lake, she stayed with Aunt LaVerne; and when I attended the University, I boarded there for the first two years, with several other students, and also my cousin Seth Droubay. Aunt LaVerne was always gay and bubbly, and very much interested in our dates and parties. She was always ready to help us with hair styles and clothes, though I don't remember that she was concerned with our studies. I did enjoy Uncle George's serious discussions on psychology and philosophy, though I was disturbed by his devotion to food fads and the latest pronouncements of the chiropractors. They were a strange couple, Uncle George avoiding anything frivolous, and Aunt LaVerne always looking for fun and nonsense.

STORY OF SULA McBRIDE BROTHERTON

Like Nephi of old "I was born of goodly parents," and I offer a humble prayer of gratitude for the inestimable privilege of having been born to Charles Reuben McBride and Rhoda Alice Lyman, his queenly wife. I am number eleven of fourteen children. I arrived at their home in Tooele, Utah, on December 3, 1895, assisted by the community mid-wife "Aunt" Libbie Lee. Mother had a difficult delivery, and my eyes were injured, causing some trouble for several months. I also had chicken-pox when I was three weeks old, but this was the only "children's disease" that I ever had, although the family was always nursing someone through one contagion or another. Along with the rest, I grew up in health and love and security, being taught the principles of Truth and Morality by example as well as precept. It was a wholesome, happy childhood. My only regret was that I was born so close to Christmas. I never had a birthday party, neither I nor my sister Sadie, who was born December 23, two years after me.

I attended the local school, a block from our home; and the fine teachers I had through the grades and high school left a profound influence on my life and learnings. All of us went through the grades of the church organizations, too, under the choice spirits called to guide the young people of the community. These teachers helped to instill in me a desire to read the magic printed word, and to develop my natural love of music. I joined the ward choir at fourteen years of age, and subsequently played the organ and piano in the Primary, Sunday School, Mutual, and Relief Society organizations, both at the ward and stake levels. I also acted as teacher at times, but felt the greatest honor was to serve as class leader in the Gospel Doctrine department in Sunday School in my mature years. I was also a school teacher for a short time just before my marriage to John Brotherton.

Our meeting occurred while I was attending Tooele High School. John came to Tooele in 1913, shortly after being released from the U. S. Army, to find work in the big copper smelter being built near our little town. Our courtship was exciting and romantic, just as all courtships should be. We were married June 23, 1915. My father performed the ceremony in our home, and John's mother and sister Louise came from Ogden for the wedding. John had a job at the newly-opened smelter, which paid $82.50 per month! We established our home with the usual errors of judgment, but with much love and confidence. We are proud of our four beautiful daughters, who have presented us with fourteen grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

STORY OF JOHN MANSFIELD BROTHERTON

I was born in Santa Monica, California, the second child of Eliza Hannah Axelby and George Washington Brotherton. My father was a railroad man, and my mother had come to California from England, at the age of eighteen. Josephine Lydia was my older sister, and the younger children were Louise and George Richard Axelby Brotherton. My parents had a small chicken farm in Santa Monica Canyon, where I was born. When this was washed away in a flash flood, we moved to Los Angeles, where I grew up. I roamed the fields, hills, and orchards, and learned to love the birds, the little wild creatures, and all growing things. I also loved the sea shore where our parents took us for picnics with our cousins.

Then the Mormon missionaries found us and converted my parents. We moved to Huntington, Utah, and life was very difficult for my parents. Later we moved to Ogden, Utah, where my father died when I was fifteen. I joined the Navy, but often cried, and remember other young boys crying in their hammocks, being away from home. When the officers found out how young I was, I was discharged. My mother married William P. Piggott, and they had a son, Milford A. Piggott. From 1909 to 1912, I served an enlistment in the U. S. Army, playing clarinet in an Army band. We were stationed at Angel Island in San Francisco Bay, and at Jefferson Barracks in Missouri. After I was discharged, I went to Tooele, where I met and married Sula McBride.

We agreed to live in Utah for twenty years, and then go to California. Life in Utah was filled with many experiences, lots of love, some small tragedies, and a struggle to raise our children during the depression years. When times were bad, we tried a laundry business; and Sula worked as a housekeeper. Then I returned to the smelter, and worked seven days a week.

There was no time for anything but work. But Sula was active in the church; and at this time we were married in the Salt Lake Temple. Since then our church has been a great satisfaction to us.

Our years in California have been good years. We moved here in 1934, and I worked in a machine shop. With much enthusiasm and exasperation, I helped to invent a tomato planter to use in the Delta Islands of Stockton. About 1935, we moved to a little cottage on a fine old estate owned by three elderly sisters. Sula helped to care for them, while I took care of the grounds. It was a beautiful place, with fruit trees, walnuts, a vineyard, and a path along the leavy to the river. It was a beautiful place, and we enjoyed our three years there very much. Our daughter Alma Rose was married in the gardens in 1937, to Bill Eicke. I performed the ceremony, as an Elder in the Mormon Church.

In 1941, we were able to purchase our own home and a nursery on the outskirts of Stockton. We sold nursery stock, but specialized in raising violets, shipping flowers all over the country. I perfected an unusual violet by crossing a small purple one with an odorless viola, pale in color. The resulting bloom was large, deep purple, and heavenly to smell. After World War II, we sold our place in Stockton and I went to work as a mechanic at McClellan Field in Sacramento, an Air Force maintenance depot, and remained there till I retired in 1953. Then we moved to San Mateo to be near our daughter Alma Rose and her family. I continued to work on landscaping projects, being my own boss and resting part of the time.

We celebrated our Golden Wedding in 1965, and are now enjoying the Golden Years. We make short and long trips in our car to see the beauties of nature, and enjoy close companionship with each other. Perhaps we are a bit anti-social, but we like to be by ourselves, reading, watching T. V., singing, or just napping in our easy chairs. Sula still plays her lovely organ for me, and life is complete. We are grateful for our life together and for the devotion of our daughters and grandchildren. May God bless them always!

FAMILY NOTES

by Lloyd George Frey

My life while living with my parents is most dear to me. It can be divided into two parts: before Father was killed, and afterwards. I was fourteen at the time of his death.

Father was a well-respected citizen of our community, and was twice elected to the State House of Representatives by the people of Mesa County. He was also a successful farmer and business man. His honesty and integrity were such that he was trusted and honored by all his fellow men, those of high standing in the state of Colorado, as well as the people in our own city. Governor Johnson of Colorado once told him: "George, you are too damned honest to be a politician!" Father was killed in an accident; he was run over by his own gasoline transport truck, just outside Syracuse, Kansas, on May 9, 1936.

After, Mother carried on the fight alone, and raised her family with the greatest of care. She never let discouragement get her down, but taught us the importance of carrying responsibility in life. She is a woman of high caliber and staunch character. She now owns a dress shop in Grand Junction, Colorado. She has had many disappointments, especially the loss of her husband, whom she loved deeply. She has been true to him through the lonely years of their separation, and is confident that in the next life she will rejoice with him whom she loves so dearly. For what I believe now, I give credit to my mother.

The memory of my Grandfather McBride is a cherished one. He really was my ideal, and I believed he could do no wrong. When I was called on my mission to Western Canada, it was he who paid my expenses and made it possible for me to go. He never knew how much this mission meant to me. I not only gained a fervent testimony of the Gospel and learned to apply the things my mother had taught me, but -- after returning from World War II a confused and disappointed young man -- I found myself. I regret that I never had the opportunity to thank my Grandfather personally, for he died while I was in the mission field.

I can also speak highly of my Grandfather Frey, whom I respected just as I did Grandfather McBride. He was reared a Catholic, and once studied to be a priest. However, he could not honestly take his vows, and eventually became an athiest -- until my own mother convinced him there really was a God. I have always been thankful that he did not take those vows, for I know that our family would not have existed if he had done so. He was an honest man of the world, and highly respected our governing laws. I remember my father's saying when we were tempted to break the law, even a minor traffic regulation: "Now, Grandfather Frey wouldn't approve of such!"

As for my own family, I am proud of my wonderful wife and our four lovely children, three girls and one little boy. My work in the building industry has carried us all over the West, and we have gained many lasting friendships in our travels. We now reside in Snowflake, Arizona, where my beloved wife was raised, and where I am manager of the White Mountain Lumber Company.

ALA CAROLYN RUTH FREY, daughter of George Peter and Sadie (McBride) Frey.
