To Love and to Cherish for Time and Eternity

June 1974

Dear Cousins:

This year a dream is coming true. The Belnap Family History Book "Heritage with Honor" compiled by Dr. W. Dean Belnap will be off the presses this fall (in time for Christmas giving), The book will cover the history and genealogy of Abraham Belknap (first to come to America), his ancestors and desendents, particularly the direct line between Abraham and Gilbert Belnap. Histories will extent to Gilbert Belnap's grandchildren by both wives and will include the listing of great-grandchildren, and their spouses. Also included will be stories, testimonies, family group sheets, and pedigree charts. Order your copy now as the volume will be limited (in number printed) edition. It is hoped that an additional volume may be published in the future (in at least five years) that will contain historical data and genealogy's on great and great-great grandchildren of Gilbert Belnap.

In last year's paper, comments were made about some of the unsung heros who have helped to make the family organization and the CRIER go each year. This year I want to pay tribute to a man who helped the family in many ways during the past five years that I had the privilege to work with him.

Wendell Taylor Belnap was appointed family treasurer in 1968. At each family reunion I attended he and members of his family were at the registration desk, getting each person who attended, recorded and receited for any payments made. He worked quitely and efficiently, not wanting the praise that comes to the other family officers who were "up-front". He did his job well and kept the family financial records straight. He died in office 27 January 1974. We will miss this wonderfully patient man.

Wendell T. Belnap

May God bless his family and relatives in his absence until they are united again.

Dean Belnap will be your new president for 1974 to 1976 and I will be leaving the Family Organization in good hands. I, with you, will be expecting renewed interest in research in our antecendent lines, both paternal and maternal. It has been a privilege to serve you and I hope to help how ever I can in the future.

Respectively Your Cousin

Richard D. Belnap

A TRIBUTE TO ARIAS GUY BELNAP

The Belnaps have always been family oriented. When they were together there always was lots of food, fun and laughter. As the years rolled by the family grew rapidly, but they still managed to have a reunion once a year.

To be an effective family gathering it became necessary to organize. Hyrum Belnap became President. He knew they needed a good organization to hold the family together. His son, Arias G. Belnap, was given the assignment to draw up by-laws. Arias put much time and thought into this assignment. The Constitution of the Belnap Family Organization was the result. It is still in effect with a few minor changes.

He has always been active in the Family as an "organizer." Many times he was the "master of ceremonies." He also served as Treasurer of the Family Organization from 1956 to 1962.

In 1950, in honor of the 100th anniversary of Gilbert Belnap's arrival to Utah, the First Edition of the book "Centennial Issue in Honor of Utah Pioneer Gilbert Belnap" was published by the Organization. The cover and sketches were done by Arias and his brother, Volney, from memory. Arias wrote the Preface and helped proofread the First Edition, which had been compiled by his sister, Della.

He became so enthused with the project that by 1952 he had collected pictures and stories and edited the Second Edition to the Book.

Arias collected the stories of Gilbert Belnap's 17 children and the Third Edition of the Book was ready for the 1956 Family Reunion.

We are indebted to Arias G. Belnap for this information and the service he gave to the Family, for now Gilbert Belnap, his wives and his children are no longer with us except through the stories compiled in the Book.

(NOTE: Arias Guy Belnap died 25 February 1974 at Ogden, Utah. See listing under "Deaths" for details.)

Church histories have indicated that Edward Partridge became the first presiding bishop in 1831 and served until his death in 1840. According to these accounts, Newell K. Whitney then became the presiding bishop.

However, the documents relating the history and development of the Church indicate that Edward Partridge was not actually the presiding bishop of the Church. In fact, the office of presiding bishop of the Church was not established until 1847. As the last presiding quorum of the Church to develop, the office of presiding bishop was preceded by the regional office of general bishops of the Church.

The office of general bishop of the Church began as a result of ten dual centers of the early Church at Kirtland, Ohio, and Independence, Missouri. In 1831 each had a congregation numbering more than 1,000.

After the troubled time in Missouri, the Saints moved to Illinois where the office of bishop was greatly expanded. Bishops were called for each of the Nauvoo wards and for the surrounding stakes. When Bishop Partridge died, there were nine bishops in the Church.

In addition to continuing the role of the general bishops, the revelation later provided for a presiding bishop of the Church: "And again, I say unto you, I give unto you Vinson Knight, Samuel H. Smith and Shadrach Roundy, if he will receive it, to preside over the bishopric...." (D&C 124:141.)

Vinson Knight, then, must be regarded as the first presiding bishop in this dispensation. He was so regarded by the Church historian Orson Pratt and by President John Taylor. However, Bishop Knight did not serve as a presiding bishop as we now understand the office, but as a third general bishop of the Church.

Following the death of Bishop Knight and the departure of the Saints from Nauvoo, Newell K. Whitney was sustained as presiding bishop. Beginning in 1847 he began to function as a presiding bishop, supervising the other bishops and the temporal affairs of the Church. He served without counselors, but with Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball aiding him in an advisory capacity.

The foregoing information was taken from the ENSIGN Magazine, (an LDS publication), December 1973, page 32. It was quoted almost verbatim from an article submitted by D. Michael Quinn, Senior historical associate in the Church Historical Department as an answer to a question sent in concerning the office of presiding bishop of the Church.

We as descendents of Vinson Knight are grateful that this information has been brought to light.

"Sis. Lillie Belnap performs a service of love each year as she uses her talents to patiently fashion lovely Christmas trees for display at the annual Festival of Trees in the Salt Palace. Money received from the sale of these trees is presented to the Primary Childrens' Hospital."

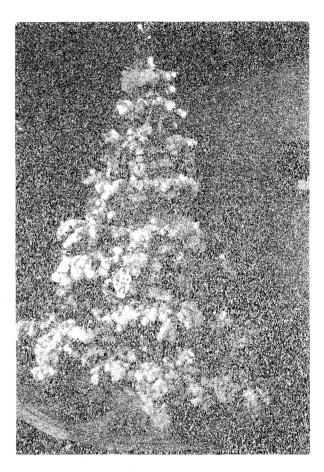

These trees once dressed in forest gowns of green are now fluffed up in crystal tears of sheen; With a heart of love this sister dreams her dream, And every year creates a special theme.

She sculptures tiny scraps of ribboned bits and laces, Then shapes and flocks the limbs in magic places. Upon these boughs there's more than pillered glow -- There is a prayer and hope that only she can know.

Enchanted pines now await the Christmas dawn Where a crippled child can find a branch to lean upon.

Lillie Belnap is the wife of L. Lovel Belnap - 5th child of Vinson Knight Belnap and Sarah Emily Hardy - 9th child of Gilbert Belnap and Adaline Knight.

by Levi Belknap, his son, of East Barnard, Vermont and spent his childhood in Connecticut. He set out to visit his brother who lived at Hanover, New Hampshire in the spring of 1780, and settled in the new town of Middlesex, now Randolph, Vermont, where he cleared timber land expecting to sow grain.

That fall he started on a visit back to Connecticut. He got as far as Royalton, where he hired out for a month to Mr. Elias Curtis of Turnbridge Branch. There on a Monday morning in October, while in bed he heard the hideous yell of Indian Tories, and the language is too foul to describe. The horror the people went through as they awaited captivity. The savages burned houses, killed men, captured some, and left the women and children behind. The first night of encampment they were surprised by a party of militia under Colonel House, who had followed. After a double fire the Indians killed two prisoners and fled. The militia went back because they feared death for the prisoners if they pursued farther. Jeromiah Conant, Esq. of Pomfret, father of Seth Conant, Esq. and grandfather of the Honorable Edward Conant of Randolph, was one of the volunteers who pursued the Indians. The savages then went to Canada to Caughnewaga, the Indians' home.

Belknap was claimed by a distinguished Indian who took him home. The Indian ordered Belknap to hew logs to make a stable floor for a favorite horse. Belknap hewed the logs all round, which act spoiled the floor, and through an interpreter told the Indian that he did not come there to work. The Indian promised not to make him work any more if he would do this work. He then did the work well and the Indian kept his word.

He found in the Indian village a few hundred inhabitants living in log houses without means of education. Their enjoyments were very low. Idleness and drinking were indulged in freely. They had come through a wilderness full of wild beasts and fierce men. Belknap suffered greatly from home sickness for a civilized land where people observed the Sabbath and lived decent lives.

After three months he persuaded his captors to sell him to the Simeon Belknap was born at Ellington, Connecticut, April 6, 1758, British for the sum of $5.00. To his great disappointment the British promptly shut him up in a close prison. There he found some of his fellow captives. He stayed there five months, then was moved fifty miles up the St. Lawrence River to Prison Island for safe keeping. Here two hundred men were confined in an old block house with short rations and no conveniences. They were allowed to go outside at times in small companies and make a small garden to raise vegetables. They were there two summers and one winter, and were much abused by their Tory guards. They had heard no news of the Revolution and we can well imagine the horror and despair that was in the minds of those unhappy prisoners. At the beginning of the second winter they decided that death was preferable to remaining there.

> The island was in the middle of a river three miles wide and the current was very rapid. Belknap had dislocated his ankle, which made him lame for life, and he could not swim. The prisoners knew that the boats that passed down the river must go four and one-half miles before they could land. Knowing all the discouragements and dangers with a guard around the prison every night, they went to work in August and told only a few prisoners of their plan. They took up a board under their bunk and went under the prison, which stood up a little from the ground. Having nothing but a case knife, they dug a hole four feet square and four feet deep. Only one man could work at a time. They then took a horizontal course under the prison wall where the guard walked, and continued for twenty-two feet to get beyond the pickets. They then opened it on top of the ground. Once a rain filled it up, but they bailed it out.

In October Belknap told a guard that, as they must remain another year, the prisoners wanted to save garden seeds. He cut up lettuce for seed and hung it between the fence pickets to dry where they would be coming out so they would not be seen. A large number of the prisoners were told of the intended escape with the threat of death if they told the guard.

They came out at midnight, and as they emerged they heard the guard sing out "All's well!" They separated into parties of four. Belknap. Steel, Clark and Sprague went together. They made a raft of four cedar poles twelve feet long. They tied them together with strips of blankets from their bunks. Each man sat on a corner which caused the raft to settle so that they were half under water. In this position with boards for paddles they went down the river four and one-half miles. But as they saw light on the shore they were afraid to land. They went on much farther and landed on the north bank of the river, for they saw some houses where they thought they could get some provisions. They had previously obtained a horn of tinder steel and flint with which to light a fire. They also had some parched corn and some flour mixed with lard.

At daylight they hid in the forest and hunted at night. On the third night they found a two-year-old heifer, which they killed with their old case knife. Having taken some of the meat they found a boat and started across the river. The boat leaked so badly that in spite of the fact that two of them dipped with their hats all the way, the boat was over half full of water when they arrived. Knowing that the Indians took no prisoners a second time, they traveled a number of days toward Vermont expecting to be killed by the Indians. Because the land was swampy it showed their tracks.

After several days of travel and resting and warming by a fire they built, as they were gathering wood one night for another fire, they heard the report of a gun. After listening Belknap left the three at camp and went to discover from whence it came. On reaching the hilltop he discovered in the valley, forty rods away, about thirty Indians and Tories encamped for the night. They at once took a different direction and traveled all night. In twelve days after leaving the island they reached Lake Champlain. They feared to cross in daylight because of British sail boats, so they made a raft of withes and old logs and attempted to paddle across in the night. The wind arose and frustrated their efforts. After this hard night on the lake they were glad to get back to their starting place.

Later they traveled up shore to Split Rock where they succeeded in crossing. For the next nine days they suffered terrible privations and hardships. Their food was gone. It was the last of October and the weather was cold and cloudy. For a week they wandered exhausted and the sun did not shine. Some of the party decided to go back to the lake and give themselves up to the British rather than starve in the woods. Belknap said he would not go back; that he would rather starve in the woods. However, it cleared in the night and when the sun arose they took hope and also found they had been lost and had gone in the wrong direction. Before evening they came to Otter Creek. That night they found a mare and colt and turnips. They killed the colt and for supper dired on roast colt and turnips. The supper made them sick. After a night of great distress and vomiting they started out again. At noon they found three horses which they caught and made bridles of bark and rode all afternoon. In the evening they came across a man chopping wood. When he saw them he was frightened, and no wonder. They were short of clothes when they had left prison. Now they were ragged. They had not shaved for weeks and were almost shoeless. This man went with them a mile to a fort at Pittsford, Vermont, where a few families lived. They could not stop there on account of the British. They traveled on and stayed all night with a widow who owned a cow. She gave them bread and milk and let them sleep on the floor. They thought they had good fare.

They had been 21 days without shelter, and nine days without food, except things found in the wilderness, such as frogs, etc. After leaving the widow they went to Castleton where Belknap's uncle lived. Here Mr. Steel and Belknap parted with their two comrads, Clark and Sprague, to meet no more on this earth. One lived in New York and the other in Virginia.

Belknap and Steel wanted to go home but were too exhausted by hardship and starvation. They wrote home and in a few days their fathers came and took them home, where they met parents, brothers and sisters who had not seen or heard of them for a year and a half.

In 1781 success came to the American soldiers and the remaining prisoners were released. From them Belknap learned that 21 prisoners came out that night. Twelve came home and nine were captured and taken back. Next day the Commander in Charge had offered a guinea ($5.00) to the guards.

(NOTE: Simeon Belknap was 81 years of age when he told this story.)

Sheriff Ward of Salt Lake City telephoned Sheriff Belnap of Ogden that he had arrested a man and woman who were fleeing from an embezzlement charge in an eastern city, He, Ward, had arrested this man and also a woman with him. The man seemed a perfect gentleman and asked that he not be locked up in jail and said that he would be willing to pay a guard in a respectable hotel. So the Sheriff let them stay in the Cullen Hotel in Salt Lake, third story. He placed a man to walk the hall in front of the room all night. In the morning when they entered the room, the woman was there but the man was gone. He had torn up the blanket and let himself down by the window, Ward also notified Sheriff Belnap that he had wired the Sheriff at Kansas City that the man was caught and said the Sheriff was then on he could see the predicament he would be in. Sheriff Belnap asked Sheriff Ward what had become of the woman? The Sheriff said that she | fearful. Belnap suggested that he could help her out and borrowed a was liberated as they had no charge against her. Belnap suggested to Ward to hunt her up quickly and keep close track of her and never mind the man.

Later in the day Sheriff Ward called Sheriff Belnap again and said the woman had bought a ticket to Ogden, and he thought he would come on the train with her. Belnap suggested that Ward keep out of sight. If he came on the train at all to get into the engine room and not speak to Belnap when he reached Ogden. Belnap then gathered his grip and went to the depot.

When the Salt Lake train arrived he easily picked out the lady from the description given him by Sheriff Ward. As she stepped off the train onto the platform, Belnap stood close by speaking up in a loud voice and said to the bystanders: "Where is the C. P. Office?" One of the laboring men standing close by pointed it out to him. He walked up to the C. P. (Central Pacific) ticket office, the lady following close along behind.

When he reached the office he gave the ticket agent a wink but said, "Give me a ticket to San Francisco." The ticket was furnished and the money paid. He stepped back a few paces with his back to the lady and fixed some things in his grip.

In the meantime, the lady purchased two tickets to San Francisco. When she had gotten her tickets purchased, Belnap then spoke up and said, "Where is the C. P. train?" He walked out to it and the lady followed. He walked into the car and sat near the center and the lady took a seat just behind him. Before they reached Hot Springs the lady began a conversation. They talked pleasantly together till after they passed Brigham City. At this time it was dark in the evening and the lady said to her the train coming, and that he would like to have the best help because friend, Belnap, that she expected to meet a friend in Corinne and that she was to get off on the dark side of the train and she was a little lantern from the brakeman.

> When the train reached Corinne, Belnap helped her from the train, As they stepped off the train, the gentleman met her, took her grip in his hands; then Sheriff Belnap told him to hold up his hands while he put the handcuffs on him. Although he cursed and swore vehemently, Belnap took the man and woman back to Ogden on the next train and turned them over to Sheriff Ward.

> The above story was told by Hyrum Belnap, the brother of Sheriff Gilbert R. Belnap.

* Della A. Belnap is the 5th Child of Hyrum and Anna C. Bluth Belnap, and neice of Sheriff Belnap.

History of the Sheriff's Office

Since the beginning of Weber County history, the Sheriff of Weber County has progressed significantly from the traditional pace of our Pioneer Days to our present day of Automation and Speed.

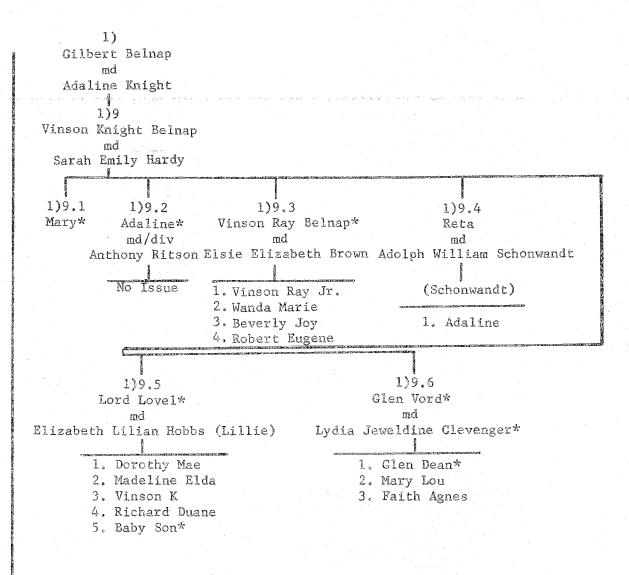

The purpose and principle is basically similar, however, the scope of operation, economically or administratively, has been contrasted by the needs and demands of industry, the technological advance, population, education and warfare.

Crime has not changed much in the basic concept but has increased both in rate and pace. Criminals have become more educated and as a consequence the means and methods of combating crime, the needs and demands of Law Enforcement and the application of Law enforcement, principles is in contrast to the time after the Territorial Days and about the time of Sheriff B. F. Cummings in the year of 1852.

On November 11, 1853. Sheriff B. F. Cummings requested appropriations to purchase a supply of ball and chains. On September 16, 1861, Sheriff L. A. West was ordered on motion that horses beloning to deceased persons would remain in his care and be kept in herds.
