

Board Told Costs Up On Center

Substantial increases in rent appear on the not too distant future for agencies using the Weber Community Education Service Center.

Center Director Spencer Wyatt says a 30 per cent increase will be necessary Jan. 1, and another 33 per cent on July 1, unless state or federal funds become available to help finance operation of the facility.

In a report to the Weber Board of Education, Dr. Wyatt said "federal dollars that have been used to pay for the center have dried up."

As a result, he said, the center will end the current fiscal year with a $22,703 deficit.

The center carried over from last year $36,949 which means it is spending almost $60,000 more in operating expenses this year than it will get in revenues.

NOT USE

Board members agreed with President Henry Matis that "we don't want to use funds for the regular kindergarten through 12th grade program to pay for the center."

Dr. Wyatt endorsed this position, asserting "we can't justify spending any funds in the center that aren't generated at the center."

HOUSED IN CENTER

A number of adult and community education programs are housed in the center, including the Skills Center North, Weber Adult High School and several federal and state manpower training programs.

"Until this year, the center carried its weight and carried it well," Dr. Wyatt told the board.

But rising costs and the drying up of federal funds has tipped the balance toward a deficit operation.

"In its first year of operation in 1973-74, the center had a surplus of $37,000," Dr. Wyatt reported. "Now we are running a $22,703 deficit."

"While federal grant funds have stopped, inflation and program expansion have increased costs significantly each year since the center opened in 1973," he said.

RENTAL INCREASE

Board Member Patrick Baggs asked what the response of the tenants has been to the prospects of the rental increase.

"Very positive," Dr. Wyatt replied. "They realize they can't get this service at this cost anywhere."

'Crucible' About Real People, College Theater Director Says

"Weber State Theater's production of The Crucible will not be the traditional interpretation," said Director Leonard Rowley.

"We are not making this story sombre, black, and ugly. 'Crucible' is about marvelously real people who, even in the face of death, can see humor in their condition."

"The Crucible" is being presented in the WSC Fine Arts Center Little Theater at 8 p.m. Dec. 1 through 6 with a Saturday matinee on Dec. 6 at 2 p.m.

Actors as well as director and designers have done in-depth research into the Salem witch trial. Suzanne Goecheritz said of her character, "I have found statements that Elizabeth Proctor actually made and comments about her by friends and accusers. These facts have helped me greatly in character development."

RICH CLOTHING

Designer Buckley Jeppson is not stereotyping either his costumes or sets. "Crucible is ordinarily done in Pilgrim black and white. But Crucible Puritans wore rich clothing made of velvets and richly colored in earth tones, maroons and deep greens," he said.

Director Rowley has included in the concept of his production not only the particular persecutions during the Salem witch trial but the more universal idea of violence and oppression at significant moments in history.

Tom Bennion has developed this concept through a series of prepared projections which will introduce each act of the play.

Multi-media will also be used in the lobby before the show where projections developed by Douglas Stuart show pictorially how myth, superstition, and even witchcraft have been predominant historically as well as in our present day society.

Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Little Theater Box Office, 393-1773, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for the convenience of working theater-goers.

Special family rates for Monday evening are now included in Weber State Theater's Douglas Stuart show pictorially ticket policy.

Plain City Opposes Race Track Proposal

PLAIN CITY—The City Council has voiced strong objections to the time and location the County Planning Commission has set for a public hearing on the rezoning of 90 acres near the city on which a race track is proposed.

The council voted to write a letter to the commission formally protesting the hearing.

SET HEARING

The County Planning Commission has set a public hearing for Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the

MAJOR IMPACT

He said he is concerned about the proposal and its impact on Plain City.

"This $4.5 million development will have a major impact on our community and our lifestyle," he said.

Councilman Taylor said that residents already living in the city have been turned down when requesting to connect into the city's sewer system because the system couldn't handle it.

"The developers are saying they are going to hook into our sewer system and they haven't even contacted us about it," said Councilman Taylor.

He also said the development will have a heavy impact on the traffic patterns in the community and the residents of the city should be made aware of these potential problems.

WRONG TIME

"To call a public meeting on this issue when people are still at work is wrong," said Councilman Taylor.

The councilmen said that presently it isn't the proposal they are objecting to but they are objecting to the public hearing on it being held in Ogden.

MRS. CLINTON STEELE Directs Youths

Husband, Wife to Serve Local Salvation Army

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Steele, who were commissioned Salvation Army lieutenants in June, have been assigned duties with the Ogden Salvation Army Corps, Maj. Edward M. Scriven, commander, announces.

The lieutenants transferred here from Grand Junction, Colo. They will assist in the Salvation Army's charitable and spiritual programs.

Lt. Georgia Steele has organized a primary children's group, ages 6 to 11, that meets Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m. and a youth group, ages 12 and older, that convenes on Thursdays at 6:30 p.m.

Her husband joins in teaching music and giving the spiritual lesson.

Girls are forming a Trimble Brigade, learning routines with tambourines to the accompaniment of march music.

The couple leads devotions at the chapel, 2635 Grant, Sundays at 5:30 p.m.

Mrs. Steele is active in the Home League, a women's group, that meets Wednesday at 10 a.m., also in the chapel.

Commission OK's Buying Of 3 Parcels

The Redevelopment Commission has authorized purchase of three parcels in the 2500 block of A Avenue as part of the continuing development of West Ogden Park.

Seller of two of the lots is Fred Wheelwright, who is due to receive $5,450 for two parcels at 2514-A and 2516-A.

Mrs. Thelma Stewart's property at 2510-A is being acquired for $12,250, said Seth J. Butterfield, manager of redevelopment services.

Negotiations continue for a parcel owned by Clarence P. Clements at 2512-A, with the city agreeing to pay $11,000. But Mr. Clements said a Veterans Administration appraisal determined the fair market value at $16,000.

Under the community development program, the city proposes to clear the bluff on which the four properties are located and use the dirt to fill the lower park site.

A renter of one of the acquired properties will be relocated through the assistance of the Ogden Housing Authority, Mr. Butterfield said.

RONDA MONTGOMERY Earns Trip

VIRGINIA JOHNSON Insects Tops

GOING TO CHICAGO

4-H Youths Win Trips

Three Weber County young people have won trips to the National 4-H Congress on Nov. 30-Dec. 4, in Chicago.

They are Alex Papageorge, Ronda Montgomery and Virginia Johnson.

All are students at Weber High School.

Young Papageorge was Utah's dairy winner. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Papageorge of 1638 Farr West Drive, he cared for four dairy cows, one bull, 13 heifers and helped with 100 dairy cows on his family's farm to win his trip.

He has been in 4-H for eight years and won the Plain City Dairy Days Outstanding exhibitor cowbell this year.

Miss Montgomery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Montgomery of Liberty, is Utah's home management winner.

During her seven-year project, she has learned food preservation and preparation and has helped in decorating her family's home.

Active in 4-H for eight years, her projects have included clothing, leadership, consumer education and home improvement.

Miss Johnson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Johnson of Huntsville. She is a regional winner in entomology.

Also in 4-H for eight years, her entomology collection includes insects from all over the country. She was the Weber County winner in meal preparation in 1974 and has been active in other 4-H projects.

Another state winner was Chris Papageorge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Papageorge of 1638 Farr West Drive. She received the award for her 4-H dog and training project. In other 4-H projects, she was the county meal preparation winner in 1975.
