

THOUGHT HE HAD CRAZY MAN

OFFICERS FOUND "HOLY JUMPERS" IN A SECLUDED SPOT

From Whence Their Loud Supplications to the Lord Had Been Wafted Afar.

(From Tuesday's Standard.)

Shortly before 10 p. m. Monday a telephone call was received at the police station, to the effect that a demented man was at large in the vacant lots near the end of the Twenty-fifth street car line and that the residents of that neighborhood were decidedly frightened.

Officer Frank Smyth was immediately dispatched to the scene. Upon arriving at the end of the car line the officer heard what he supposed to be the cries of the crazy man. He cautiously made his way in the direction from which the sounds came and, after going some distance, he stopped to get his bearings. Listening, he discovered that there were two voices instead of one and what he heard he took for curses.

Creeping up closer, the policeman came to where there was a slight hollow in the ground and there, by the light of the rising moon, he beheld two men upon their knees with their faces on the ground. Even at this stage of the strange proceedings the officer did not know what it all meant and, walking up to the two forms, he threw his night lamp upon them only to discover that he had interrupted two members of the "Holy Jumpers" who had sought that spot to converse with the Lord.

To the officer they stated that they had been called to where they would be away from all other persons, to commune with the "Holy Ghost."

It was the prayers of the two men that the officer had taken for curses and it was their loud supplications that had been taken by the residents of the neighborhood for the shrieks of a demented man. After the explanation was made, the Jumpers were permitted to continue their communication with the Lord, although warned to be less boisterous in their wailings.
