Special to The Tribune
OGDEN—Selecting Dr. John Beal of Cedar City to succeed Lester Taylor of Park City as head of Utah State Elks association, nearly 800 Utah Elks gathered in a grand state convention here Saturday also agreed to send a float representative of Utah's varied resources to the national Elks convention in Los Angeles, next month.

Reports of state officers and committee heads: selection of Cedar City as the 1937 convention city; awarding of the Harry S. Joseph and the association drill cups to the winning Cedar City team; industrial tours, band concerts, the convention banquet and a dance also marked the busy convention day.

Elect Officers
Other officers elected Saturday included seven state vice presidents: Dean R. Daynes, Salt Lake City; Howard S. Griffin, Logan; Al. T. Hestmark, Ogden; Stan B. Wilson, Eureka; Charles Knobbs, Price; D. St. Jeor, Park City; and E. W. McFarland, Cedar City; O. E. Vombaur Jr., Salt Lake City, reelected secretary, and George W. Welch, Salt Lake City, treasurer.

On suggestion of Harry S. Joseph, Salt Lake City Elks, convention delegates agreed to boost Utah by sending the float, representative of the state's mining, agricultural, livestock, horticultural, educational and industrial resources, to the national convention in Los Angeles, July 12 to 16.

Financing the all-state entry was left to the individual lodges, who will make a per capita assessment of members. Mr. Knobbs announced that the Price Antlers' band of 90 pieces, which played here, would be sent to the national convention by the Elks lodge of Price.

Opens With Contest
The convention was opened Saturday, with ritualistic contest between the Cedar City and Park City lodges. The teams conducted initiations and other work until noon. The Cedar City team won temporary possession of the association cup and permanent possession of the Harry Joseph cup.

Opening the business session Saturday afternoon, Arthur Woolley, past exalted ruler, of the Ogden lodge, made an address of welcome, as did Mayor Harmon W. Peery and Secretary E. J. Fjeldsted of the chamber of commerce.

Dean R. Daynes, head of the state association student loan funds, reported that students were attending the Utah university, Utah State Agricultural college, Brigham Young university, Westminster college and the Branch Agricultural college by means of loans made from the fund. Only two requests for student loans next year have been received to date, he said.

Card parties and tours of the city were conducted Saturday afternoon for women visitors.

David L. Stine acted as toastmaster at the convention banquet Saturday night in the Hotel Ben Lomond, introduced the new officers and Exalted Rulers W. B. Roberts, Salt Lake City; Clifford Huss, Ogden; L. F. Anderson, Park City; E. W. McFarland, Cedar City; and H. S. Griffin, heads of the Eureka, Provo and Price lodges were unable to attend.

Following the banquet, convention delegates were led by a clown, hand to the Elks club for the convention dance.

Summer Play Centers Open

OGDEN—Ogden city children began last week their summer schedule of games, craftwork, dancing and varied other activity carried on annually in the city's play centers. A greater registration than that of last year was reported by Miss Edvonia Jeppson, city recreation director.

The tennis season on the municipal courts is expected to begin in earnest next week, when Clifford Doxey and Bill Kinner will continue their periods of instruction at Lester, Liberty, Monroe and Lorin Farr parks.

Meanwhile, at district W P A headquarters, similar recreation programs were being outlined for the remaining school districts of northern Utah, to be operative June 15. Advisory boards are being set up in each county to draft and regulate the program. Federal funds will be available for equipment and supervision, according to Verne B. Thorpe, director of adult education relief work in the district.

Where Ancient Culture Artifacts Repose

A two-months' scientific expedition into southern Utah's Navajo country will start June 13 from Berkeley, Cal. Utah scientists will accompany the party. Three Groups of Scientists To Explore Navajo District

Two-Month Expedition Into Last Great Wilderness of U. S. Scheduled

Special to The Tribune
OGDEN—Three caravans of scientists, representing many of the country's major universities and equipped for a two-month penetration into one of the last great wildernesses of the United States, are expected to arrive in the southern Utah Navajo country next month to begin the fourth annual Rainbow bridge-Monument valley expedition.

The western caravan will leave Berkeley, Cal., June 13, arriving at Kayenta, Ariz., about June 18, 10 days ahead of the eastern group. Proceeding by motor to the Rainbow bridge national monument and the Navajo mountain region, they will establish the base camp near the head of the Dogoshi Biko on the Rainbow plateau and prepare for explorations on foot.

Lay Base Camp
The Utah members of the expedition will form part of the western caravan, which will lay the base camp and undertake other preliminary work. Walter R. Buss, instructor at Weber college, was host of the party last year and this year's lone representative. This year at least two others are to be selected and will be announced, probably this week.

The eastern caravan will leave the Explorers' club in New York City June 19 and join a Chicago party two days later. They will arrive June 23 in the west, but will remain 10 days later in the fall to break camp.

Discovery of a Basket Maker burial cave, which included virtually every type of artifact known to that early culture, is among the valuable contributions made by the expedition to archeology. Mummies dating back 1500 years were found in well-preserved condition.

Find New Designs
Many new designs in Pueblo pottery were discovered, collected and photographed—some of them in the Keet Seel cliff dwelling, one of the largest ruins in the southwest, and many in previously unexplored parts of the Rainbow plateau.

One of the purposes of the expedition, which was organized three years ago under direction of Ansel Franklin Hall, chief of the field division of the United States national park service, is to examine the potentialities of this "remotest corner" of the country for national park possibilities.

Charles Del Norte Winning of New York university will be field director of the party. John Wetherell, noted southern Utah Indian trader and now custodian of the Navajo national monuments, with headquarters at Kayenta, is assistant field director.

Chiefs of the various parties have been appointed as follows: Archeology—Lyndon L. Hargrave, field director for the Museum of Northern Arizona; Geology and paleontology—Dr. F. B. Loomis of Amherst university, noted explorer for 20 years; Biological sciences—Dr. Clarence C. Clark, chairman of the science department, New York university; Mapping—Arthur G. Atkinson, Modesto State college, California; River voyage party—Lloyd W. Lowrey, Winters, Cal., who also conducted the voyage down the San Juan and Colorado rivers in 1933.

OGDEN—Weber county's claim for $26,694.08 against David W. Evans, former Weber county treasurer, and the National Surety corporation, bondsmen for the office during 1931-1935, was settled by court compromise Saturday when District Judge Lester A. Wade issued judgment against the corporation for $16,000.

The compromise settlement had been agreed upon by the county and bonding company representatives, and the judgment was issued upon such stipulation in court by Attorney Arthur E. Moreton, Salt Lake City, representing the corporation.

A release and satisfaction of judgment was signed Saturday afternoon by Charles A. Halverson, chairman of the county commission, and Paul Thatcher, Weber county attorney, upon payment of the $16,000 to the county.

Weber county, Ogden City, Ogden City and Weber county schools and the state of Utah all will participate in a distribution of the $16,000, Lawrence M. Malan, Weber county clerk, said Saturday.

Cache County School Board Holds Meeting

Immunization of Pupils Scheduled in Health Program for District

Special to The Tribune
LOGAN—A health program in Cache county school district was adopted Friday at the board of education meeting. The program calls for a complete immunization schedule as recommended by the Cache county medical association and county nurses. Miss Emma Willmore, county nurse, met with the board and explained the program in detail.

The plan provides a complete physical examination of the children in the first, fourth and seventh grades at the expense of the school district. According to the plan, these examinations will be carried on every three years, Clerk Lloyd M. Theurer stated. It is also recommended that all county teachers and bus drivers of the district be immunized with the school children.

Repairs Budget
Superintendent J. W. Kirkbride recommended the board adopt a budget of repairs on the basis of estimates submitted and permit only projects approved and authorized by the board to be carried out. The recommendation was adopted. The clerk was instructed to set up and operate a proper accounting system.

The superintendent also suggested the clerk be designated as assistant budget officer and business manager, cooperating with the superintendent, and that a budget be drawn up according to law and distribution be made to the various schools, departments and functions which will serve the district best. The superintendent and clerk are to make the distribution.

Drivers Cautioend
Bus drivers of district-owned buses will not drive more than 35 miles per hour over roads that are not hard surfaced, and 40 miles per hour on hard-surfaced roads. Reprimand for failure to comply with this ruling on the first offense and dismissal from service for second offense was the penalty laid down by the board.

An appropriation of $100 was made for beautification of the Mendon school grounds. Mayor Neph Sorenson of Mendon and Durrell Hughes, principal of the school, asked for the appropriation.

OGDEN—Members of the Ogden regional council of the L. D. S. church relief program will meet at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday in the office of William H. Reeder Jr., president of the Mount Ogden stake, in the Eccles building, to discuss progress.

Reeder, secretary to the presidents of 10 stakes—Lyman, Mabel, Woodruff, Morgan, Bex Elder, Bear River, Mount Ogden, Ogden, North Weber and Weber—by Mr. Reeder, chairman of the council, requests the stake organizations to make complete reports covering seven items in the program.

The unemployment survey to be conducted in each ward is to be completed by the Tuesday meeting. The survey, which will classify all persons needing work, according to age, sex and occupation, will be used as a basis in determining types of make-work projects.

Possesses Old Legal Library

Judge N. J. Harris of Ogden, who possesses a rare legal library on Utah's statutes since the state was admitted to the Union.

Former District Judge Owns Rare State and Church Books

Unusual Private Collection of Documents Includes Deseret Constitution

Special to The Tribune
OGDEN—An unusual private collection of old legal and church documents is the prized possession of N. J. Harris, former district judge and one of the oldest practicing attorneys in Weber county.

A volume published in 1855—containing the constitution of the provisional government of the state of Deseret, ordinances passed by the general assembly of the state of Deseret and territorial laws of Utah from 1852 to 1855—is the only one of the edition found thus far in a private collection by the historic records survey of the federal writers' project.

Original Laws
This book contains the first secular legislation adopted in the state, that of the constitutional convention of March 18, 1849. In it also are the ordinances that the Deseret state legislature passed in the assumption that congress would grant statehood. The 98 chapters of territorial laws of Utah dating from 1852 to 1855 were included when the book was published.

A complete list of session laws, with the exception of the 1872 and 1878 terms, brings up to date the nearly complete compilation of state and territory legislation in Utah. Judge Harris has been trying vainly for many years to obtain copies of the two missing session laws in his series. If the legislative publications which he possesses are as rare as the ones he is missing, he concludes they are valuable indeed.

Prized Possession
The most prized law book of his entire collection is the record of the first state legislature, in 1896, when he and his fellow legislators set the machinery of the state in motion. For 40 years he has watched this same machinery in operation, most of the time, he admits, with gratification.

His favorite volume, however, is a copy of the first edition of the Book of Mormon for which his great-uncle, Martin Harris, sold his farm to finance. First owned by Melvin Wilbur of Providence, R. I., it came into the hands of Dwight Eveleth, who went to California in the early '50s. The widow of Mr. Eveleth gave the book to Ephraim A. Nye when her family "became indifferent to the gospel."

Mr. Nye, one of the L. D. S. church southern states mission and who had been with him at the time of his death, was offered any single volume from Mr. Nye's library as a reward. His selection was very easily made, he says.

Drop in Relief Rolls Revealed

Special to The Tribune

OGDEN—Relief rolls of the eight northern Utah counties have been reduced by nearly 50 per cent since March 1, it is shown in the June 1 recapitulation compiled by district WPA headquarters. Seasonal private employment and revived construction work under non-relief governmental agencies are responsible for the improved condition, the report indicates.

Although reduction in relief rolls is noted each spring, the improvement this year is greater than the regular seasonal improvement, District Administrator Robert W. Craven said.

Certified relief cases not absorbed in private employment numbered 2218 at the present time, compared to 4035 cases three months ago. The reduction of 1817 cases is estimated at 500 more than during the same period last year, although no direct comparison is available.

Church and Agricultural College Leaders Talk at Services for Dean

Dr. West was dean of the school of engineering and mechanic arts at the Utah State Agricultural college and bishop of the Logan L. D. S. Fifth ward, and died Wednesday morning after a 10-day illness of pneumonia.
