Research Seen As Vital Need In Dairy Work

Future of Agriculture Dependent on Study, Visiting Farmers Told

Special to The Tribune
LOGAN—One hundred ninety-three dairymen from Utah and Idaho attended the opening session of the fifth annual dairy day program at the Utah State Agricultural college experimental farm Tuesday morning.
Professor George B. Caine, head of the dairy department, welcomed the visitors and introduced Dr. Lowry Nelson, director of the experimental station, as chairman. Dr. Nelson explained that the research work with the experimental herd had been inaugurated 12 years ago with stock from Oklahoma and South Dakota.
The project, he explained, is in cooperation with the bureau of dairy husbandry and aims to find practices of breeding and management of dairy cattle that will improve herds.

Research Work
"The future of agriculture in Utah will depend on the research work of the experiment station," Dr. Nelson said. "We have come to the end of the pioneer period. Our young people cannot look longer for free land on the public domain, because all the free land is taken."

"It seems to me that a partial solution to this problem lies in the readjustment of our agricultural enterprises to absorb more of our population. Some such adjustment, as I see it, can be made in the dairy enterprise," he concluded.
Lyman H. Rich, extension dairyman, then discussed record keeping and production work in Utah. He paid high tribute to Dr. Stephen M. Babcock of Wisconsin, inventor of the butterfat test, and traced the history of herd improvement work since it began more than 40 years ago in Europe.

Four Utah Testers
Mr. Rich introduced the four testers in Utah: Del Gay, for Utah, Salt Lake, Tooele and Summit counties, with 64 herds and 1064 cows; Junius Baird, for Richmond-Lewisville association, with 44 herds 540 cows; O. H. Parkes, for Hyde Park, with 19 herds and 150 cows; Anthony Collette, for Weber, Box Elder, Davis and Morgan counties, with 47 herds and 572 cows. Each tester reported briefly on the accomplishments of his respective association and urged the dairymen to improve their herds with a program based on the testing of individual production.

Dr. Nelson then introduced Professor Caine, who outlined the breeding program that goes with the dairy herd improvement work. He explained charts which showed the results of proved sires on the experimental herd at the college farm.
Professor Caine was followed by Superintendent George Q. Bateman of the farm, who urged the dairymen to feed surplus hay to dairy cattle during the summer months to supplement the pastures. This practice will stop the rapid decline in the milk flow because of diminishing feed in the grazing areas, Superintendent Bateman said.

In the afternoon session at the farm J. R. Beus, president of the Utah State Dairy federation, told how his organization is helping the dairy industry in promoting an educational program to show the need for milk in the diet and for the production of high quality products. He predicted the passage of a cream grading law in Utah within the next few years.

Tooele Tax Levy In Slight Drop

TOOELE—A total of 34.9 mills will be assessed Tooele city property for 1936, as compared with 38.5 mills for 1935, it was decided at a meeting of the Tooele county commissioners in the courthouse recently.
The lowering of 3.6 mills over last year's levies was made through the state taxing fund and the county fund, with the schools and cities staying about as they were in 1935. 1936 tax levies are as follows: General fund, 1.8 mills; widowed mothers' fund, .5; indigent, .5; county roads, 2.9; county schools, 8.5; state taxing fund, 8 mills; a total of 20.2 mills for the county.

Rescued Youth In 'Fair' Shape

Victim of Fall Treated at Cedar City

Special to The Tribune
CEDAR CITY—Edward Sodemán, rescued from the canyon floor of Cedar Breaks by four fellow C C C workers Monday, after having fallen from an 80-foot ledge, was reported in "fair" condition at the county hospital here Tuesday night. He has a broken pelvis.

Further details of the rescue were recounted Tuesday by Park Ranger Gordon Croft; F. F. Ralle, superintendent of the Cedar Breaks C C C camp; and Arthur R. Angalione, member of the rescue party.

Tried Short Cut
Sodemán was injured late Saturday when he attempted a short cut route out of the eroded chasms which comprise Cedar Breaks. He crawled into a cave during the night, when one of the worst rainstorms of the year struck the area. Without food and delirious from shock and exposure, he was found late Sunday by four fellow workers. Mr. Croft considers the region in which the injured youth was lost as the roughest and wildest territory in the entire area. "It was fortunate that Sodemán was not washed down the canyon by Saturday night's flood," he said. With eight other searchers, Mr. Croft returned from the canyon early Tuesday unaware that the object of their search had been returned to safety.

Storm Landslides
Meanwhile, Angalione and the three other C C C enrollees were suffering from sore muscles by the long walk through the innumerable chasms and ravines on the floor of the breaks. Several huge landslides were caused by the recent storms.

Unable to get the injured youth to safety Monday night, the four C C C boys stopped to rest and, almost famished, killed a porcupine and attempted to eat it.
"We had a hard time skinning the animal with only one dull pocket knife, but finally had the carcass prepared for cooking, Angalione, who is second cook at the camp, reported. "After watching the meat sizzle for about 30 minutes, we decided to eat it, but, much to our disappointment, it was like trying to chew rubber. Finally we gave up the idea and continued on out of the canyon still hungry and almost exhausted," he told.

Barrett, milk inspector for the health department, filed a statement outlining provisions of the ordinance with the city commission.

"The market milk producers Tuesday complained that some types of herds are required to be tested, while others are not. Such a condition, they said, imposed an unfair penalty on market milk producers."
Mr. Barrett declared the government will make all tests without expense to the producer and also will pay from $25 to $50 indemnity for any reactor eliminated. So far, 1200 reports have been received for cows tested in Willard, Farr West, Slatterville, Harrisville, North Ogden, Kanerville, Eden, Liberty and Huntsville.
